Thousands of Refugees of High and Low Degree Seek Asylum North of the Line

BY FREDERICK J. HASKIN

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 1.—Ever since the trouble started in Mexico, refugees have been pouring across the Rio Grande in a continuous stream. Those of the more prosperous sort have worked north as far as San Antonio and east to New Orleans in considerable numbers. All classes have flooded El Paso, where a special census recently taken by the government shows that over half the population is Mexican.

Plots in U. S.

The aristocratic refugee sets himself up comfortably in some city in the United States and plots and works for the glory of Mexico and himself; but the poor peon has no such easy way of life. When it gets too hot for him in his own country he packs his household goods in a great creaking wagon drawn by two scrawny little cayuses and laboriously moves his family into the United States. And then, perhaps, the Texas rangers start hunting Mexicans, and he sighs and drags his establishment wearily back across the international bridge. He cares not for factions or theories of government. He prays only for peace to raise beans and chile.

These Mexicans living in the United States, as a class, have won for themselves a very doubtful standing. The arrest of Mexicans who lived in Columbus on the charge of being Villa spies has not improved their position. A Mexican living in the border states may be a peaceful farmer, a citizen of the United States. Likewise he may be a spy for any one of forty-seven different factions, or an ammunition smuggler, or a bandit. Furthermore, the situation is most anomalous in that he has only to cross the Rio Grande to change his political status. He can be a law abiding resident of the United States on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and a Mexican bandit Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. If for any reason he is not allowed to cross the international bridge, he can swim or wade across the river at night, and make a little spending money by carrying a few boxes of cartridges, purchased in El Paso and sold for twice their value on the other side.

All Politicians

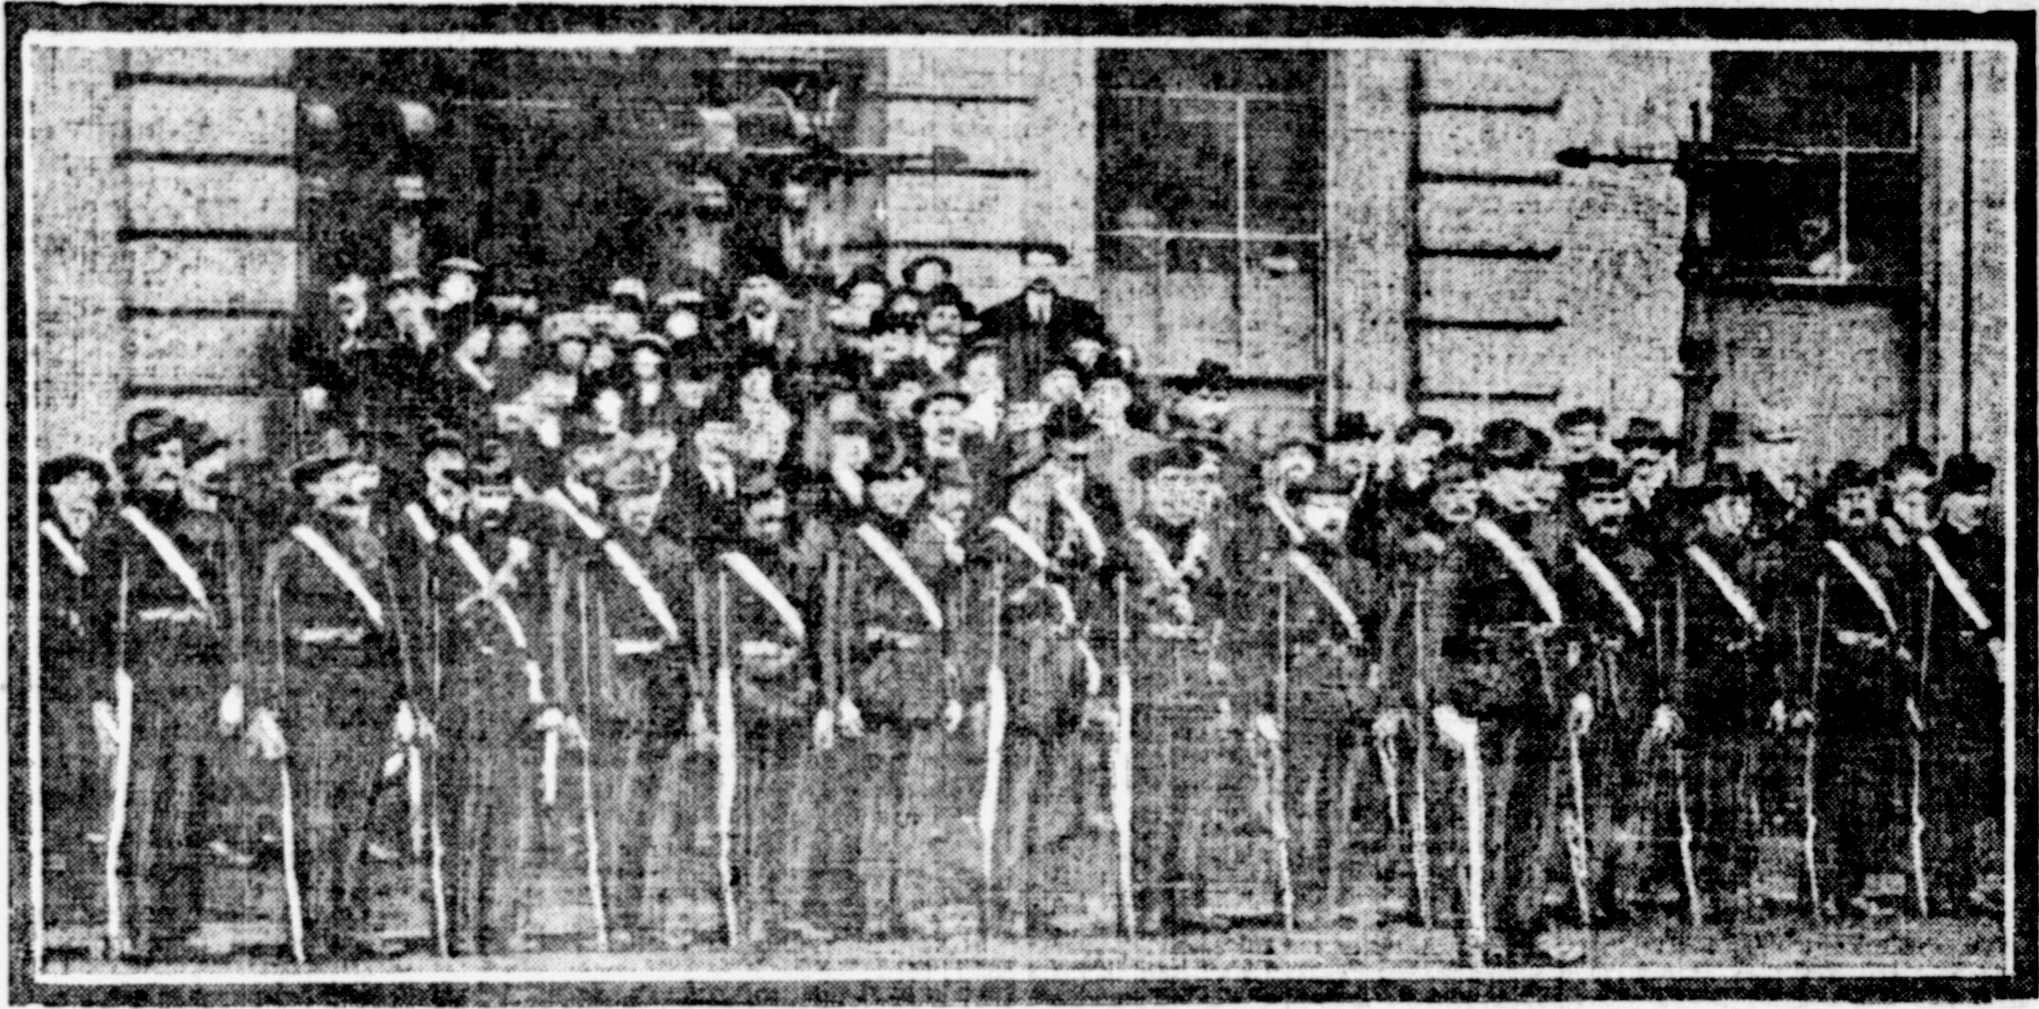

There is no accurate knowledge as to how many of these Mexicans there are in the United States. The 1910 census showed that there were then 221,915 persons in the United States who gave Spanish as their native tongue and Mexico as the land of their origin. Beyond a doubt, the number has greatly increased since then. There are 32,000 Mexicans in El Paso alone.

These natives of Mexico are not, however, the only men of their race in the United States. There is another large element of Spanish-speaking Americans, who are as distinct and different from these refugees as a citizen of Boston whose ancestors came over in the seventeenth century is from a Welsh coal miner who landed at Ellis Island day before yesterday. This other element is the Spanish-speaking population of New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado. The forebears of these people were living on their same lands when New Mexico separated from Old Spain. They are practically all native citizens of the United States, and Uncle Sam has no more loyal sons under his flag.

Many on Border

In the plaza at Santa Fe there is a monument to the men who were killed in the battles of Valverde, Gorieta and Peralta in the civil war. These men who died fighting for the union, and saved the southwest from the confederates, were nearly all so-called "Mexicans." (They prefer to be known as Spanish-Americans if they are to be distinguished at all.) In the governor's "palace," there is a tablet in memory of Captain Luna, who raised a company of LONDON, May 1.—All the Dublin rebel commanders have surrendered, it was officially announced this afternoon.

The government forces now occupy Four Courts, the last portion of the downtown district to be surrendered by the rebels. The seven days' Irish rebellion passed into history early today.

Troops were making a systematic canvass of the city today, searching every house for arms and ammunition, and arresting suspects in houses where rebels uniforms were found. Official headquarters issued a statement at midnight declaring that Peter Pearce, leader of the rebels, and James Connolly, "commander of the Irish army," wanted to make terms before their surrender. They were told that they must lay down their arms unconditionally and that the same condition applied to the surrender of their followers. Connolly was wounded at Liberty Hall, but is not dead, as reported Sunday.

A large force of Sinn Feiners at Enniscorthy, eighty miles south of Dublin, has surrendered to government forces after a thirty-six hour truce, according to dispatches received here today.

Several small isolated detachments including one band near Enniscorthy are holding out. Skirmishes between rebels and government troops continued in Dublin and the outskirts Sunday, but there was little fighting in the heart of the city.

1,200 Rebels Taken
More than 1,200 rebel prisoners have been taken in Dublin and other centers of rebellion. The latest estimates place the total number of dead and wounded in the seven days' fighting at about 200 and the property loss at more than $10,000,000. Proclamations were posted throughout Dublin late yesterday announcing that the rebel leader, Pearce, had called on all his followers to surrender. Sinn Fein snipers wounded several men pasting up the proclamations.

GERMAN REPLY MAY BE HANDED GERARD
TOMORROW EVENING

Embassy Believes Reply Will Deal Only with the Principle Involved in Discussion

EXPECT REPORT FROM AMBASSADOR

Gerard Understood Cabling Result of His Conference with Kaiser on Sea Issue

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Germany's reply to the American submarine note probably will be handed to Ambassador Gerard tomorrow evening, according to opinions expressed at the German embassy today. It is believed the note will deal only with the principle involved in the discussion, and that the specific cases, in which the rights of Americans were involved, will be left for future settlement. Once the matter of submarine conduct is settled, the question of disavowal of past incidents and reparation to be made for loss of American life and property can be easily arranged, embassy officials believe.

Newspapers today carry a story that the Kaiser in his conference with Ambassador Gerard appealed for the preservation of friendly relations between the United States and Germany, intimating that if friendly relations are broken off the United States will be unable to act as mediator between the warring nations, such a contingency being openly hinted at by the Kaiser and that if diplomatic relations were broken off between the two nations, the war would be prolonged indefinitely.

Some light may be obtained on the German-American situation before night. A long dispatch from Ambassador Gerard, outlining his conference with Kaiser Wilhelm, was reported enroute today. It is believed the dispatch will clear up at least some of the doubts as to just what Germany proposes to do in meeting President Wilson's demands. Unofficial dispatches from Berlin stating there had been something of a reaction in the optimism apparent there during the last week, found reflection here.

Delay Annoying
The threatened delay in Germany's reply is causing some annoyance. It is deemed unlikely that Germany would trifle with American public opinion to the extent of permitting the anniversary of the Lusitania sinking—next Saturday—to pass without definite avowals of intentions in the present case.

ANSWER THIS WEEK

BERLIN, May 1.—Germany's reply to the American note will be dispatched to Washington this week unless some unexpected incident oc-

DEAD MAN'S HILL
IS BROKEN DOWN

BERLIN, May 1.—Fierce fighting occurred yesterday on Dead Man's hill northwest of Verdun, but the battle resulted in no change in the situation, the war office announced this afternoon.

Elsewhere on the western front, the situation remains unchanged.

German Assault Powerful

PARIS, May 1.—Following a violent bombardment, the Germans last night launched what the war office described as a "powerful, close formation attack," against the trenches recently gained by the French north of Dead Man's hill.

The assaults broke down under French fire, the enemy suffering enormous losses. Another German attack on the Cumières sector was also repulsed.

The German attack was delivered with more violence than were the blows last Friday that marked the resumption of the crown prince's drive on Verdun.

RIVER DROPS AND

Street Car Service to Onalaska Resumed This Morning with Fall of Water

TREMPEALEAU FILL IS HOLDING

Burlington Train Service Is Re-established and Danger Is Considered Past

With a drop of four-tenths of a foot in the Mississippi river stage here since Saturday night, both street car and highway traffic between La Crosse and Onalaska, which has been floodbound for five days, was resumed this morning. The first interurban car was run to Onalaska yesterday morning, but due to the fear of weakness in the right-of-way the regular schedule was not resumed until today.

With the Burlington's announcement today that all trains were now operating between La Crosse and the Twin Cities, and that the long embankment between Trempealeau Mountain and East Winona was holding without sign of weakness, it was believed that practically all flood danger had passed.

To Fall Rapidly
Indications from upper Mississippi stations are that the river will fall rapidly for several days. It is expected to descend at the rate of from two to four inches daily.

However, the stream today was still above the 1916 mark of April 9 and 10, when the water stood at thirteen feet and one-tenth.

Hopes are running high in Goose Green that the siege of more than a month will be raised. The falling of the water reveals a slimy coat of mud and silt along the banks of the "lake," and Goose Greeners anticipate a merry time renovating their yards and homes after the flood leaves their district.

Road Is Saved

The road to Franch Island, with the fall of the water, presents a strange appearance, having been raised in some places more than a foot. It was saved from damage by wave action in Saturday's high wind by the mat of brush and hay lining the bank.

Copeland park has suffered much from the waves, many holes having been washed into the bank. Condition of the island road delayed the city collection of garbage which was scheduled to begin today. The water is so high that it is considered unsafe for wagons, and it was impossible for the city to deliver garbage to the hog-ranch of J. P. West on French Island. Mr. West has contracted with the city for the

SAVES TWO FROM DROWNING IN HIS FLOODED YARD

Ori Allen's Life-saving Station on La Crescent Pike Is Busy Saturday

CAR PINS DRIVER IN WATER

Three Girls Thrown Into Flooded Bottoms When Machine Turtles; Hobo Near Death

Saturday proved a busy day for the lifesaving station operated by Ori Allen, whose home stands a few feet above that part of the Mississippi river which has backed up into the La Crescent bottoms. Mr. Allen saved two from drowning in his front yard, once when an automobile tipped over and pinned its driver into the water, and some hours later when a wanderer missed his step and fell in.

Three Girls in Car

Three girls from La Crescent were soaked when A. J. Griffin's machine tipped into the water from the causeway in the afternoon. Griffin, who was driving the girls back from La Crosse, made a mistake with his steering wheel, and the car turned turtle off the road. The girls, Miss Laura Olmquist, teacher at La Crescent, and Misses Vivian Welch and Mary Horihan, La Crosse high school students, were all thrown clear of the machine. Miss Olmquist was stunned by striking either a part of the car or something on the bottom, and was unconscious when her companions pulled her out of the water. She recovered quickly, however, and was none the worse today.

Griffin, a one-legged man, was caught beneath his machine. Fortunately, however, the water at the point where the machine went off the road is only three feet deep, and he was able to keep his head above water. Miss Welch and Miss Olmquist ran to Allen's home for aid, while Miss Horihan attempted to extricate the driver. With the aid of an Indian who came along, and of Mr. Allen, she was able to raise the car sufficiently to allow Griffin to be dragged out of danger.

Boat Rescues Hobo

Shortly after midnight screams for help from his front yard awakened Mr. Allen. With one of his sons he got into the boat tied to his porch and rowed out to find John McLaughlin, a vagrant, exhausted and about to sink in a hole ten feet deep. He had missed his way in the dark and blundered off the road.

Allen carried the man into his home, and telephoned for the La Crosse police. The victim had recovered consciousness when the police car arrived, and he was taken to Central station. He was released this morning.

MUNITIONS WORKERS IN LINE

Cleveland and Youngstown Machinists Demand Shorter Hours and Set Wage Minimum

HARBOR ENGINEERS CAUSE TIEUP

Steamer Patria Held in the Harbor Because of Strike of 700 Tug Engineers

What is without doubt the greatest labor situation ever confronting the country has apparently developed, with walkouts in almost countless instances, workers demanding shorter hours with no decrease in pay or greater pay for present periods of service. Pittsburgh was without street car service as 3,100 carmen struck. Three thousand five hundred machinists in the manufacture of war munitions in Cleveland are out as well as 2,000 machinists in the Youngstown, Ohio, plants. One thousand Akron carpenters demand increased pay and 5,000 operators of the Nickel Plate road threaten to strike if their wages are not increased.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 1.—Not a street car moved in this city today. Conferences between the street railway company officials and representatives of the carmen continued until midnight, with Mayor Armstrong as mediator.

Agreement was reached on all points except that of wages. The companies' stated limit on that point fell one cent per hour short of the lowest wage that the men were willing to accept.

Mayor Armstrong made the first move to bring the Pittsburgh railways company and its 3,100 striking carmen together today. Shortly after he reached his office he received Business Agent J. J. Thorpe of the union for a brief conference. Soon afterward President W. J. Dawson Callery of the traction company went into conference with the mayor.

The mayor was asked by the traction officials today to see that the company's property was specially guarded. They expressed a fear that strikers or persons in sympathy with the strike might attack it.

In an early statement today the mayor said it was "a crying shame" that it was found necessary to call a strike, as the company and its men were near an agreement.

The 250,000 or more who walked to their work this morning nearly all accepted the strike as a huge joke. There was no disorder. There will be no effort to run cars, according to President J. Dawson Callery, of the Pittsburgh Railways company.

The cars of the fast Harmony-Butler interurban line, with Newcastle connections, were being operated to the city limits.

Apparently the company was depending upon its operation of mail cars to fulfill the franchise condition that it shall operate at least one car a day over its lines. The carmen were picketing every barn, but had no work to do.

City Employees In Too

Fifty employees of the city's bureau of filtration walked out this morning when their demands for an increase in pay from $2.10 to $2.50 per day were refused.

The beds were cleaned last on yesterday and the entire city will be without pure water after midnight unless the strike is settled. Barbers of 86 shops were ordered out at noon because of failure of their employers to sign a new wage agreement.

The TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

THE ETERNAL FEMINE

BY IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Hello, hello! Yes, this is Milt. Oh—Milton's tone breathed interest and surprise—"It's you, girlie?"

Beth turned around and stared with wide open eyes, listening.

"Indeed, I will—right away. Not a bit of it. I'm awfully glad to help out. Goodby."

He hung up the receiver and wheeled about, looking not at Beth, but at the clock.

"It's Mrs. Hewitt. Her husband's in Baltimore, and wired her to meet him, and the maid's gone, and there's nobody to help her down with her suit case. She wants me to run up to dinner and take her to the station afterward. You don't mind of course, Beth?"

"Who is Mrs. Hewitt?" she asked frigidly.

"Why, she's a girl I knew out in Denver, you know."

"I don't know. How old is she and what does she look like?"

"Now, Beth—"Milton looked a bit bored as if he hated to go into the subject, it was so trivial—"I think we agreed that real love is above jealousy. This is only common courtesy. I've known 'Girlie' Cooper—she used to be a Cooper—since I was a boy at school. She's about 24, I guess—around there."

At eighteen, twenty-four looks worldly wise and experienced. Beth pursed her lips.

"I'll be back by nine," added Milton.

"I don't see why on earth she singled you out if you haven't seen her in years—"

"Oh, I've seen her. dear. I know her husband well. He's a splendid fellow, handsome man you ever saw. Girlie's so much in love with him it's almost funny."

Beth looked at him with growing suspicion.

"Do you think you'll need a cushion as a tame cat?" she inquired witheringly. "You needn't come back here, Milt. She could call a taxi and go down by herself. Of course, you can do just as you please, but you needn't come back here if you go carting suitcases around for old sweethearts."

"She wasn't a sweetheart," Milton retorted wrathfully. "Now do we have to scrap over this act of common courtesy, Beth?"

She eyed him dispassionately.

"I'm not in the least bit angry, but I won't have you play the part of a carpet knight. What right has she to call you up and ask you to carry her suitcase for her if you never were engaged? Does she know we're engaged?"

"I guess so. Why, Beth—"

"Would you like me, after we're married, to call up some old sweetheart and ask him to escort me to the train at a moment's notice?"

"You're absurd."

"I am not. If you do, you needn't come back. Why did she call you up here?"

"I told them at the hotel to refer any one here," Milton watched the clock.

"Is she blonde?"

"No, no: Brunette, brown eyes, brown hair. Beth, please be reasonable."

"You know, Milt, you can't deceive me on this. She leaned her adorable chin on her palm and looked up at him. "I've heard of 'Girlie' Cooper. Mrs. Daniels told me you were engaged to her and perfectly wild over her five years ago. I think it's terrible for the man you love to have memories of other girls."

"I never was engaged to her, Beth—"

She rose suddenly and left him standing there, expostulating.

She really did need a lesson, Milton told himself severely. Utter lack of faith in him was too much to bear unchecked. He would take Girlie to the train, and show her every courtesy. It was only common decency. Beth's very opposition had invested the situation with the zest of adventure. Girlie had never really cared for him any more than she had for twenty others. She had always been a favorite, and was a mighty nice, sweet girl. Of course she'd never have Beth's snap and charm of strength of character if she lived to be a thousand years old, but she was a good girl.

All this he told himself going up to Girlie's all the way through dinner, all the way downtown. Girlie talked incessantly of Hobart, her husband, of his congressional ambitions, his tastes, his achievements, showed all his news clippings and photographs. She was a little, appealing sort of woman, with big brown eyes and a wistful chin. Milton found himself comparing her mentally with Beth's beautiful clear-eyed buoyant girlishness.

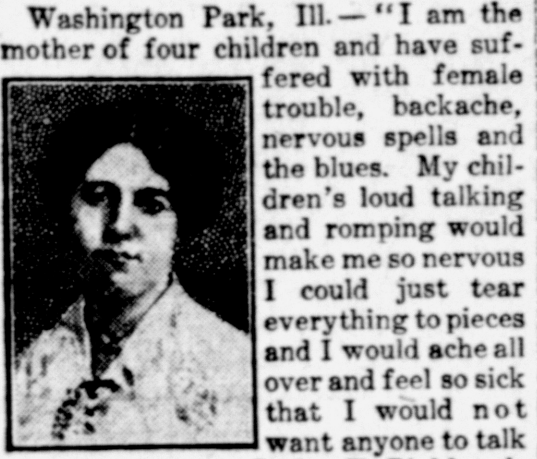

"You know the real reason why I asked you to see me to the station, Milt," she said as they entered the taxi. "It's for Hobart's sake. I want you to see that his new bill is handled fairly by the papers. You will, won't you Milt? I don't know myself just what it's about, but it must be a splendid measure or he'd never take it up. He's that type of man, you know, Milt. Just ask Miss Wharton."

"Beth?" asked Milton, alarmed, "what does she know about him?"

"Why, didn't you know?" The big brown eyes met his in surprise. "She saved his life. We've been married a year, and it was before he met me. She was hardly more than a child, he told me, and they were all winter at Pinehurst for the late winter season. I believe he was accidentally shot, and she found him as she was riding through the mountains and saved him."

"Was—was he in love with her?" asked Milt feebly. "Quite romantic, wasn't it?"

"He was till he met me," Girlie answered complacently, "but he'll never destroy her pictures. He's got forty snapshots of her. I do believe, taken that season. I hated her till I heard you were going to marry her."

They reached the station. It seemed years before he had put her safely on the train, wired Hobart for her and was finally alone. When he called Beth up, she was out. Four times he called. Then word came back that Miss Wharton had just returned from a theater party and must on no account be disturbed. He walked home three miles, through the night, thinking.

Next morning Beth met his usual, radiant and ready for their usual walk in the park.

"I'm so sorry, dear," she said, "but you know you would go. I know women are perfect cats, and she only wanted to tell you about Hobart and me, so I tried to keep you from going. I refused him about ten times. Milt, and I'm not one bit jealous of her."

Milton stared thoughtfully at the spring vista ahead of them. And he had feared to wound her, had wanted to teach her a lesson.

"Why didn't you tell me you knew him?" he asked.

"I never even thought of him. Don't you know, Milt," her voice was strong with faith, "when the real big love comes into your life it seems to just sweep away everything else. Besides, I didn't want you to know I was—er—lobbying. Isn't that what you call it? The woman's club I belong to is behind a bill, something about fountains at street corners, and we wanted him to prevent it, so I wrote to him about it and it comes up tomorrow. Aren't you glad, dear? If you only could get something into the papers about it, I'd love you for it, Milt."

Milton gloomed at the landscape, realizing for the first time in his life the underlying power of the eternal feminine.

"I'll try," he promised.

Mrs. Dwyer of Neillsville is visiting her daughter Edna.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Moore went to Sparta on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Van Wie have taken rooms with J. P. Reinhard for the summer months. Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Frisby have rented the house on Kilbourne avenue vacated by the Van Wies.

News was received in Tomah on Saturday of the death of Miss Minnie Benjamin of Sparta, the daughter of the late A. D. and Mrs. Helen Benjamin. The family was among the earliest settlers in Tomah, coming here from Ohio in March, 1863. Miss Benjamin was a very successful teacher in the Tomah public schools for about eleven years. The family moved to Sparta about twenty years ago, where they have since resided. Mrs. Benjamin is still living. Mr. Benjamin died about six years ago.

The funeral services will be held in Sparta Tuesday morning and brought to Tomah for burial. Miss Benjamin was a member of the Rebekahs.

On Saturday afternoon Miss Saries, who has been giving dancing lessons in Tomah the past winter, gave a recital at McCaul's hall. The children, who were in costume, took their parts very creditably. The program, which was a trip abroad to see the children in the European countries dance, was opened with "The American Beauty," by Alice McCaul. The rest of the program was as follows: The Sailor's Horn Pipe, Mildred Anderson; The Highland Fling, Helen Bartel; The Ace of Diamonds, Helen Hanover and Florence Fox; Jumping Jack, Helen Bartel; Spring, Katherine McCaul; The Highland Fling, Helen Bartel.

VILLISTAS NOT IN FIGHTING MOOD

BY H. D. JACOBS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
GENERAL PERSHING'S HEADQUARTERS, NEAR NAMIQUIPA, Mexico, May 1, Wireless to Columbus, N. M., May 1. — All fight has been taken out of the Villistas, according to officers of the Seventh cavalry who have arrived at Providencia camp along the American communication lines. The bandits were hit so hard and so often since the punitive expedition entered Mexico, according to the cavalry officers, that no large group of Villistas remain.

The Carranzistas were credited with having given the Seventh cavalry valuable assistance.

VERSE and REVERSE

Concerning the Garden

The best I ever got from garden seeds

Has been a growth of swear words and of weeds.

Each spring I've gone down to the hardware store

And blown for tools two months stipend or more.

I haven't got much faith in nature now.

But what I have I'm going to keep I vow.

She'll not hand me the buncombe as of yore.

I'll buy my green goods at the corner store.

The Cavity

Cholly—The dentist told me I had a large cavity that needed filling. Ethel—Did he recommend any special course of study?

If we ever attempt to paint a picture of Cupid it will look more like a girl with a fish net than a boy with a bow and arrow.

"THE WILD IRISH ROSE"

Said one of the "brainiest" of La Crosse citizens, when told of the Irish uprising: "Ah!—The Wild Irish Rose", which is about as seriously as most people take the rather momentous incident.

Not in all this war of wars has a blow been struck in so good a cause. Its purpose is clean and wholesome, with no lust of wealth or empire, just with love of liberty. Futile, of course, and bad judgment. At long range it is opera bouffe, but close-up the old men and the women from the "shanties" make it bitter enough tragedy. Yet, with defeat certain, there are no tears; a sympathetic world feels its heart leap joyously with the deed and with the soul of Shamus O'Brien laughs at consequences.

There is something "different" about your Irishman. When he foments rebellion it is not treason, it is an escapade. He's a creature separate and immune, for although he has been hung in the name of the king it has been a ceremony rather than a penalty. Others are daring, he is dashing; others courteous, he chivalrous. What he does, does not matter, for the way he does it makes one want to cheer. And so here is the world watching Sir Roger Casement's "blow for Irish liberty", not as a thing of historical significance, but as a spectacle. Some wonder if he will be hung, but more wonder whether it will be a brilliant hanging. Whether or not it has deferred home rule for twenty years is of no consequence, because the big and satisfactory fact is that it is Irish and it is ideal. Probably without exerting a definite influence upon Ireland's future, Sir Roger has done the Celtic thing in truly dramatic style, inserted a tapestry page in history and won the right to be called "picturesque".

England has learned some things that she did not know prior to our American revolution. What they are one hears in Canada and in Australia. How complete her education may be disclosed by her methods of dealing with the little "pa-arty" in Dublin. After all, it is but another of those hopeless adventures with which ever and anon some son of Erin seeks to "gild the slough of his despond". Sir Roger Casement never had a chance. Now he is an Irish patriot and an English traitor, worthy to be decorated in Dublin and hanged in London. Perhaps, since England is judge, a compromise with precedent may be that he be decorated first and his medals hanged with him. However, we're waiting to see whether there has really come to Britain the bigger idea. Since in England the Irish do only the fighting while the English occupy the civil offices, we shall not expect the government's personification on a foaming black horse to interrupt a sunrise execution with a reprieve, as gallant Hibernians would have done it. It will have to be very plain, very matter-of-fact, for men who eat muton-chops for breakfast can't write verses. But a prose declaration of amnesty for Sir Roger would be poetry in the ears of civilization. This Irish interpolation will serve to test the value of the world-war's issue, for it will show whether the thing for which England pretends to contend exists at all.

TROUBLING TROUBLE

Probably the centenary of Charlotte Bronte was celebrated by few readers of present-day fiction. In the tragically hopeless and the hopelessly tragic the gray gloom does not invite the well-named "cheerful reader" of the twentieth century. Rebelling at conditions from which she suffered much, herself always tired and seldom if ever happy, this gifted woman could not lift readers above her own depression. Genius she had—such genius as made even the biographical style, rambling and almost interminable, readable, and had they a more cheerful strain her stories might have now a wider following. But the playful generation that demands the comic supplement, Coney Island and "T. R." will have little time for fiction which makes the reader sorry for the characters, sorry for the author and sorry for himself.

BEGIN AT THE BEGINNING

In offering its readers "John the Fool", a serial novel, the TRIBUNE feels that it has conferred on lovers of good fiction a favor and a delight. When Charles Tenney Jackson, a Madison boy, wrote "The Midlanders", he contributed the best political story of the year and found a place among the "best sellers". Since then he has written other good stories, but leading them all is "John the Fool". A fine bit of chivalry—early colonial type—modern industry in proportions of sentimental bigness, two real men in keen-edged rivalry, and two women, Latin romantic and modern efficient, sketched in such lines of flesh and blood as shall make the reader known them as intimates. Something doing every minute, and several minutes per the installment in this tale.

The New York Staats-Zeitung says, "As a political asset a war is invaluable to the aspirations of Woodrow Wilson."

The Staats-Zeitung is most egregiously mistaken. Keeping the country out of the war is Mr. Wilson's great political asset. — Milwaukee Sentinel.

You don't get it, Sentinel. A war to keep the country out of is President Wilson's greatest political asset.

Quips and Cranks and Wanton Wiles

Overcharged

"Mercy!" ejaculated young Mrs. Kidder, in the midst of her reading. "Here is an account of a woman who sold her baby for 50 cents!"
"Oh, well," returned her bachelor brother, who had at sundry times cared for the children while his sister went shopping, "all kinds of swindles are being worked nowadays."—Kansas City Star.

Evidence of Genius

"He started life with a shoestring and now he has $1,000,000. Seems incredible, eh?"
"Not at all. I should consider that a man who could get anybody to buy one shoestring was inevitably bound to succeed."

Unavailable

"There is a man who never says an unkind word about anybody."
"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "I don't believe we should waste time with him. Admirable as his qualities may be, how could he be useful in a political campaign?"—Washington Star.

Kind to Him

Wife—The dressmaker says she won't make me another gown until you pay her bill.
Hub (with relief)—That is very good of her. I'll send her a note of thanks.

A Persistent Flatterer

Mother—Why don't you yawn when he stays too long? He'll take the hint and go.
Daughter—I did, and he told me what beautiful teeth I had.—Farm and Fireside.

The Whale's Little Joke

Tom—That saying "It's hard to keep a good man down," is thousands of years old.
Dick—That so?

Tom—For a fact. That's what the whale told Jonah.

The Booster

"Mister, I'm a stranger in town. I'm lost and can't find my way to the depot."
"Better settle right here, my friend," advised the booster. "You couldn't locate in a better place."

It Was There

Professor Physics—Now, young man, what is a vacuum?
Young man—Why, er, er, well, it's in my head, professor; but I can't seem to think of it just now.—Browning's Magazine.

Adept

"And is your wife a good housekeeper?"
"Oh, wonderful, mother! She can heat coffee perfectly with an electric curling iron."

HOBOKEN

Several thousand members of the human family look on Hoboken as home, but for every one of these there are a hundred who think of Hoboken as a place whence you start for some place else. Hoboken is completely surrounded by a web of trolley-lines, subway lines, railroad lines, ferry lines and trans-Atlantic steamer lines, leading in all directions. No place on earth is so easy to get to, and conversely no place is so easy to leave. So it is a simple matter to look Hoboken over, and equally simple to retire if the prospect does not please.

At Hoboken you see the world-famous Jersey commuter in his finest form. He begins to arrive early in the morning, the tide of him gradually swells to an eight o'clock rush, and then dies down to a trickle of leisurely late comers, who grow more and more important with every passing hour. For the schedule time of the train you catch over in Jersey is just as good an index to your financial importance as a rating in Bradstreet's would be, if you had one.

The commuters who figure from eight to nine are not featured in Bradstreet's. They are the rank and file of New York army, the kind that make the wheels of the metropolis go round. They crowd through Hoboken in legions, morning papers grasped in their right hands, umbrellas in their left, pushing through and under and over each other with one eye on the headlines, their feet carrying them mechanically from the train platform to the gaping mouth of the subway tube, that shoots them under the river to spew them forth through its dozen outlets in the downtown district. Hoboken sees them no more until 6 p. m.

The commuter never sees Hoboken, unless perchance he has to wait for a train and wanders along the water front where the interned German liners rust in the slips, and the piers that are usually crowded with the friends of departing voyagers drowse in the charge of a drowsing watchman.

This part of Hoboken is all seaport. Seamen's homes labeled in half a dozen languages left their heads inviting Jack ashore to forage the delights of "blowing" his accumulated wages and bask in the sun on the benches they offer. Cafes and store windows are garnished with impressionistic paintings of many colored liners breasting monstrous purple seas. One store even offers a volume in several European tongues that purports to be an easy method for learning the American language.

CHAPTER I
The Wood Saint

"Blow, San Antonio—e!"

It seemed an echo—high and clear—out of the flooded forest aisles.

Then laughter, mocking our little captain's cackle. Allesjandro turned with his hair on the mast of his red-sailed lugger; he grinned at us about the limp canvas and then resumed his trot along the gunwale, wiping the sweat from his grizzled brow.

Laughter it was, and mocking us again, as we sat in the Good Child, which lay in the slowly floating bloom of hyacinths, far across this purple garden the white shell beach of Isle Bonne seemed no nearer than an hour ago. The south coast sun was April-warm, and the gray forest wall invited with its shadows as we drifted in that morning calm.

"Blow, San Antonio—e!"

And again the three of us in Allesjandro's lugger stared helplessly into the cypress jungle—where was she?

For of all places—as my young friend, Redfield, put it when he arose astride his suit-case in the stern of the Good Child—"of all places that one would expect to find a girl, and laughing at us, it's the limit!"

Virgil Williams nodded to me, with patient delicacy, ignoring the other man, as he had done these four days now when their hatred deepened.

"I told you, Doctor Dick," he put in gently. "That's the girl, and that's the island. It's the last of the sweet lands and beyond it run the salt tides. The sweet land is what I'm fighting for—against the Gulf of Mexico, and a girl!" And the gaunt Texan, with the eyes of a dreamer, looked wistfully past the white shell beach to the wilderness: "Only, Doctor Dick, somehow, I can't explain all my problems to the land company."

As a director of the Prairie Meadows Land and Development Company I straightway guessed as much. Even though I couldn't see her, because my eyes were now aching with all the colors under that Louisiana sky, Allesjandro, dragging his running pole along his pink and blue and yellow boat, pink and blue and yellow it was under its red sail, and the little Manilaman, mahogany-brown in a shirt of emerald, limned against the purple of the floating gardens, and where one sought the open water for relief, the pools merely caught up all that morning brilliance and flashed it back to you!

Could Clell Redfield or I—men of the house habit—"New York fellows," as the Texan gently styled us—look long into the recesses of Laure's island?

The little lugger captain kept on his ceaseless trotting to pole us shoreward against the hyacinth drift; we would never make Isle Bonne's cove, that was sure; and of a sudden Allesjandro stopped and bawled into the silence, for that wood echo was mocking us again:

"Blow, San Antonio—e! Blow San Ignacio! San Pancrasio! San Pietro! San Barrabo!"

There were some strange saints in Allesjandro's calendar. But—on my word—as her elfin laughter answered the Good Child lifted, beeled a bit as her red canvas filled, and the little skipper, with a crouch of delight, was back at his tiller, kicking it over with the crotch of his toes while he let the sheet run. Somewhere over the flowered water had moved a breath, and softly, as if treasuring its strength, the lugger stole from pool to pool in the opening channel. Allesjandro was forward when her bow grated on the shell beach; he was out and throwing a line about the one-plank wharf, and then, his hat off, he was bowing exuberantly—but not to his saints, I fear!

"Me—sometimes I burn a candle to dat wind you send, Saint Laure!" he cried, and bowed again: "San Barrabo, I put him last fo' Papa Prosper say not to his saints, I fear!"

Then we saw—wide-eyed, silent, curious at us—Allesjandro's wood saint. She was swinging her brown foot in the clear black water about the cypress spikes, and her gown was so of the hue of the moss-hung bark that if she had not stirred, I might not have discovered her. The shimmer of that sun-filled sea and sky was still dazzling us. She was looking with an assumption of a grand dame's hauteur at Virgil Williams; and the Texan returned her gaze patiently. Then, without recognizing him, or us two strangers to Isle Bonne, she arose with careful dignity, picked her way to the one-plank wharf and went along it to the stairs of Papa Prosper's gallerie and up them to the house on stilts above the low shell ridge.

Clell Redfield and I gaped after her as if she had been a nymph disengaged and arisen from the gray of the ancient wood. Only that slender form, her black hair in one lustrous fall of loose braids down her back, the suggested profile and the slant of her scornful eyes as she passed—well, the way she cut us was far too much of the world to leave us any illusion of Arcady. She didn't like us, that was it, without doubt.

The tall Texan man sighed: "It's me. Spoiled all her fun soon as she saw I'd come back to Isle Bonne! You see we're fighting her fo' the land, Laure and the Gulf of Mexico."

A little old king o' Spain—the three of them is some hard combination."

"The king of Spain?" I said, and even Clell forgot his mordant grimace in the Texan's presence to listen: "and why the king of Spain?"

Virgil made his old patient gesture out to the wide hot prairies beyond the swamp isle. "He is the worst of all. Been dead a hundred and fifty years, but once he gave a grant of land to one of these Drouillots. Yes, seh—half a million arpents of land to some old pirate of a duke. And here, the last of 'em sits on it—the last of the sweet land, fo' most of it's gone under the Gulf of Mexico."

Then he looked up patiently again at the shuttered house on its absurd stilts above the shell-margined swamp. Allesjandro had gone on and into its galleried recess; the murmur of conferring voices came to us with the drone of bees somewhere beyond. "And I offered 'em forty thousand dolles once for their rights to Isle Bonne—which rights are just none, unless they find the original grants from the king o' Spain. Otherwise the French heirs in Bordeaux hold it, and it's the Bordeaux Drouillots our company bought the titles from. Forty thousand, and Laure wouldn't take it—she'd rather put faith in that little king o' Spain than she would in me!"

And his high, serene smile came again.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

- - - 6V DAISY DEAN - - -

William S. Hart, the noted film star who appears regularly in Triangle Kay-Bee features, makes a specialty of playing western characters. He himself was raised on the plains of North Dakota among the Sioux Indians, so he knows something about making them true to life. But while his delineations constitute a wide gallery of western figures, he prefers one special type. This is the western "bad man."

"I like him best," says Mr. Hart, "because he is the most maligned person west of the Mississippi and I enjoy presenting him from the angle that shows him for what he truly is. I knew some famous western bad men in the early days of the Dakotas; but I never met one whose badness was indicative of the real man."

The conventional bad man has become a veritable studio lay-figure; my present mission in life is to put some humanity in him. Something of my wish seems to have been conveyed to the men who write scenarios for me; for they frequently write me bad man parts. Heretofore, the consistent villain has been given largely as contrast to the hero, or to work some mean piece of business in the plot; but as a central figure without complete conversion from life-time habits, I believe he is more or less of a novelty."

Florence La Badie In Fine New Series

Two of the eight new feature productions starring Florence La Badie, to be released under the title of "Thanquer Classics", have been completed and will be released in the near future. "The Fugitive," a five-part drama, will be the first picture in the series. In this drama Miss La Badie appears in the role of a young heiress who accepts exile in preference to having her widowed sister sent to prison. The story is novel in theme and replete with action.

Psychology, treated from an angle never before attempted in motion picture production, is the basic theme of "Woman, Saint and Devil," the second picture in the series. It deals with a quadruple personality, and is founded on a recent discovery by a celebrated psychologist.

The Searchlight

CATCHING FLIES BY ELECTRICITY

A new device for catching flies is being added to the equipment of a number of hotels in preparation for the summer season. It consists of an electric motor which draws the flies up a strong current to a pipe. Molasses or moistened sugar is smeared on the edges to draw them to the vicinity. As the flies alight upon the pipe, a strong suction seizes them and quickly drops them into a steel cage in the bottom of the pipe. This machine has demonstrated an ability to capture over a hundred flies a minute. It will clear a fly-infested room in a few minutes and can be easily carried from one room to another and operated from the plug supplying the current for electric light.

Success Attends Tea Parties Saturday Despite The Inclement Weather

Although seemingly doing his worst, the weather man did not succeed in putting a damper upon the "Baby Tea" of the clubwomen and the May Party of the Women's Guild of Christ Episcopal church. Committees in charge of both events today declare that the most gratifying success attended their efforts and that the adverse weather conditions did not decrease the attendance to any great extent.

The "Baby Tea" was held at the La Crosse club between the hours of three and five Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the three women's organizations—the Twentieth Century club, the La Crosse Women's club and the Catholic League of Women—who are promoting the Baby Week campaign, and was given for the purpose of raising a sum of money to defray expenses incurred in connection with the observance of Baby Week during the week of May the 15th. It was announced today that contributions to the amount of forty dollars were received Saturday and this sum will doubtless be increased during the next two weeks by the donations of many who were unable to attend the tea Saturday but who desire to contribute to the campaign.

The rooms of the La Crosse club had been handsomely decorated for the occasion and presented a bright cheerful atmosphere in sharp contrast to the gloom out-of-doors. The reception room had been done in green and white, with a huge vase of pink carnations lending a touch of color to the ensemble. The fire place was filled with a mass of greenery, while the mantle above was banked with ferns and marguerites. In the receiving line, at various times during the afternoon, were the Mesdames John J. Esch, John L. Callahan, Eugene G. Perkins, Charles A. McCarty, John Dangler, Arthur A. Bentley, Edward Evans, John F. Doherty, James A. Fairchild, Lillian Finch and George H. Brettnall and Miss Mary Devine.

In the central one of the three rooms given over to the ladies by the club authorities, the main object of interest was a bassinet in pink and white, containing a large baby doll, at whose feet was a box to receive the contributions in support of the campaign for better babies. Here were seen palms and ferns in profusion, combined with large floor vases of crimson roses and carnations, and a beautiful pink azalea surrounded with ferns. Miss Catherine Hayes, treasurer of the general Baby Week committee, was in charge of this room.

In the center of the serving table a large basket filled with beautiful pink roses, with a large bow of pink gauze adorning the handle was the first thing to greet the eye, and in this room, too, masses of ferns and palms added to general effect. In all three rooms ropes of smilax were hung from the windows and doors. Presiding at the coffee urn was Mrs. Olaf R. Skaar, and assisting in serving were the Mesdames George W. Lueck, W. R. Woods, Christian L. Lien, George P. Bradish, Franklin P. Morley, George R. Reay and Ralph H. Herbert and Miss Thillie Spettel.

The clubwomen desire to thank the Salzer Seed company, Tillman's, the Barron company and Sorge-Ennison for their assistance in making of the tea the success it was and to express their appreciation of the courtesies extended to them from many sources.

The Women's Guild of Christ Episcopal church held their annual May Party Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Edwin M. Wing, Tenth and Main streets, and the ladies in charge of the affair are today being congratulated upon the splendid results achieved. Practically all the articles prepared for the sale were disposed of. The general chairman of the May Party was Mrs. Harry J. Hirschheimer, who was assisted by a number of able lieutenants. Mrs. Robert W. Keyes presided in the dining room, assisted by Mesdames William R. Sill, G. Van Steenwyk and E. E. Marston. In charge of the May baskets were Miss Gertrude Tausche and Mrs. Arthur Schwalbe; the parcel post sale was taken care of by the Mesdames E. G. Atkins and Philip Jacobus and the Misses Alice Green and Helen and Louise McArthur; household articles were sold under the direction of Mrs. Charles W. Lewis and her committee, and the fancy work table was looked after by Mrs. Louis H. White and committee.

ASK HELP OF PASTORS
The co-operation of the clergy of La Crosse in the Baby Week campaign being conducted by local clubwomen is asked in a communication addressed to the pastors today by Mrs. George H. Brettnall, general chairman of the Baby Week committees. The letter asks that the clergymen observe May 14th, the Sunday immediately preceding the local Baby Week, in their churches as Baby Sunday.

W. C. T. U. MEETING
The Women's Christian Temperance union held their regular meeting at the jail yesterday afternoon. The service was opened with an unusually good song service, led by Rev. Frank Bell of Menominee, followed by prayer by Rev. H. J. Withersbee and an earnest, helpful sermon by Rev. J. E. Watson of the West Avenue Methodist church. A special musical number, "The Mother's Prayer," was given by Mr. Bell and the meeting was closed with the hymn, "There's Power in the Blood," and prayer by Rev. G. B. Caple.

ENTERTAINS FOR MRS. RILEY
Mrs. Louis Ikert Friday afternoon entertained a number of ladies in honor of the eighty-seventh birthday of Mrs. Ora Riley of Onalaska. Supper was served at 5 o'clock. Those present were Mrs. Anna Hay, a daughter of Mrs. Riley, Viroqua; Mrs. Millie Riley, another daughter, Onalaska; Mrs. Bert Adams, Genoa; Mesdames W. Sheets, W. Caldwell, Hartmann, Dunn, J. Kobitz, M. Muth, P. Muenzenberger, W. Ikert, J. Hardie, C. Whipple, A. Foster, Charles Jansky, G. Miller, all of La Crosse.

KAUS-MEYER
Miss Edna Meyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Meyer, 711 Pine street, and Mr. George Kaus were united in marriage Thursday evening. The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride, Rev. J. E. Watson officiating. The attendants were the Misses Bertha Meyer and Viola Wright and Messrs. Leonard Meyer and V. Marteau. The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of pale blue messaline and carried white roses. The bridesmaids wore pink messaline and carried pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a three course dinner was served. The rooms were beautifully decorated with roses, smilax and ferns. Mr. and Mrs. Kaus left for Chicago Thursday evening to spend their honeymoon. They will reside in this city, the groom being employed as conductor on the Milwaukee road out of La Crosse.

HELKE-MEINERTZ
Miss Katherine Meinertz and George Helke, both of this city, were united in marriage at eight o'clock Saturday evening at the residence of Rev. J. T. Gamm, pastor of the German Lutheran church. The bridal pair were accompanied by Miss Ida Helke and Gus Schultz. Mr. and Mrs. Helke will reside at 308 1/2 Main street.

Woman Wins High Honor in Sculpture
ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 1.—Mrs. Clara P. Garrett of this city, has won this year's grand prize of the St. Louis Art Salon, for her sculpture "Mother and Daughter." Mrs. Garrett is a native of Philadelphia, but has spent most of her life here. She studied in Paris and exhibited there, and has won many honors in sculpture.

Meet and Get Engaged in Thirty Minutes
BOSTON, May 1.—C. Copetas, Pittsburg restaurant man, arrived here today to wed Angelica Stathatou of this city, whom he met, wooed and won in 30 minutes, a year ago today. The wedding is scheduled to take place this afternoon at the Quincy hotel. They met here through a mutual acquaintance last year and thirty minutes after the introduction were engaged. And this in Boston, too.

Women Live Longer Than Do the Men

WASHINGTON, May 1.—That women's chance for a long life is greater than that of men is the deduction drawn from statistics compiled by the census bureau. It appears that females are longer lived than males to the extent of more than three years. This is, in some respects, the report says, because of the greater number of violent deaths among men, but the figures also indicate that the death rate of females during the first year of life is lower than for the male. The average expectation of life for white males is 50.2 years, and for white females, 53.6 years.

Biennial to Take Up Question of Dress

NEW YORK, May 1.—That the question of women's dress will be brought before the coming biennial of the General Federation of Women's clubs is indicated by Mrs. William G. Brown, chairman of the local board of the federation. "Ten thousand delegates will take back to their homes a concrete idea of dress reform that will be a blessing to the whole country," she says. "Most clubwomen want to establish a general rule against indecent extremes."

Raise Funds to Save Art Palace

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 1.—A fine arts pageant and ball were staged Saturday to raise funds to be used as a permanent institution the Fine Arts palace on the Panama Pacific exposition grounds. One of the most beautiful features was a procession of lighted gondolas around the lagoon, their illuminations gleaming in subdued colors on the stately columns of the Fine Arts palace.

Debate Adoption of Breeches as Uniform

NEW YORK, May 1.—"Girls, would you put your mother in breeches?" "Yes," came a mighty chorus from the "girls," but it had not settled to date whether the American Woman's League for Self-Defense will adopt breeches or skirts as part of their uniform. They did not vote. "Wouldn't you wear 'em," queried one of the girls of her mother. "I would," returned Mamma, half defiantly. Mrs. Ida Powell Priest, the new president of the league, is hostile to skirts. By vote the women are in favor of a $1.50 hat as against a 28 center.

You can judge no woman's sense of humor by the way she giggles at her husband's jokes.

RUSSIAN BLOUSE IN LAVENDER FAILE.

Lovers of the Russian blouse will agree that it is the most versatile of garments after seeing this, the latest effect. Lavender faile in the most delicate of tones is used for the blouse and flounced skirt, and there is an underblouse of crepe Georgette in the same shade. White silk is used for the foundation of the underblouse, however, while white silk cord outlines the large armholes and funnel collar of the blouse. In medium size the costume requires 5 1/2 yards 44 inch material.

WATER DAMAGE TO PARK MAY RESULT IN IMPROVEMENT

Great Gashes Cut in Park by Wave Action During High Wind Saturday; Damage is Great

EXPECT SPIRITED CAMPAIGN

Belief is North Side Organizations Will Ask City to Riprap Bank of the Park

That renewed agitation for ripraping of Copeland park will result from the great damage done the park by high water, and in particular by wave action during the heavy westerly wind Saturday, is the opinion of north side residents, who estimate the cost to the city of repairing the damage will run into the hundreds of dollars. William Naas, superintendent of the park, said the damage this year is the greatest in the history of the park.

Great jagged gashes were washed into the bank of the park Saturday, when a brisk wind drove waves high onto the bank, the water in the river being but a few inches below the level of the park. Large masses of sod have been washed into the river. No protection is furnished the park against wave action. Ordinarily, the water is far below the crest of the banks, but in high water great damage is invariably done.

The North Side Progressive league two years ago started a campaign for the ripraping of the park, but the movement was void of results, the federal war department claiming Black river not a navigable stream and, therefore, not entitled to government aid in the improvement. It is thought north side civic organizations will take up the matter and bring pressure to bear on city officials to bring about the desired improvement.

native troops in 1898 and was killed in Cuba. When the trouble with Mexico first became acute, three members of the Chavez family, one of the oldest and best known of Spanish blood in New Mexico, wrote to their representative in congress that they wished to offer their services to the United States army. They expressed a sentiment that is widely felt among the men of their blood. Our Spanish-American citizens are ready and willing to fight Old Mexico, or anything else, and frequently are heard to say so. They make good soldiers, too. In Albuquerque, New Mexico, there is a militia troop made up largely of Mexicans, and they are especially enthusiastic about military training.

Died in Civil War
The greater number of these Mexican citizens of the United States live in New Mexico, where they still constitute the greater part of the population. There are probably about 200,000 of them. Colorado and Arizona together might contain another fifty thousand, and there are some of the same type in Texas and Southern California.

These Spanish-Americans are not of the same blood as the Old Mexico Mexicans. The dominant class in the southern republic claims descent from the Spanish conquerors, but there is much Indian blood, both of the ancient semi-civilized Mexican tribes and the savage ones. In New Mexico, on the other hand, there is much pure Spanish blood, while those of mixed descent have in their veins the blood of the Pueblo Indians—a very different race from any of the Old Mexican tribes. In the days of penance, many of the Pueblos were owned by Spanish families, and this resulted in an infusion of Indian blood into the lower classes.

These Mexican fellow-citizens of ours are hyphenated Americans, who wear the hyphen with an excellent grace. Their devotion to the ideals of their own race is only exceeded by their absolute loyalty to Uncle Sam. In the larger towns, all those of the younger generation go to American schools and speak excellent English. In the out-of-the-way counties, where the population is almost exclusively Mexican, little is heard but Spanish. The Mexican citizen is quick to learn English when he has the opportunity, but sure to remember his own tongue, and speak it in his family.

There is no class of American citizens that take more interest in the affairs of government than these Mexicans. They are one and all politicians and they have very considerable talent, as a race, both for oratory and for practical politics. Before the last election, for example, in Taos county, New Mexico, a republican convention was held in which all of the business was transacted in Spanish. An enthusiastic political campaign in the United States carried on in a foreign language would be an anomaly in any other state in the union, but in New Mexico it is usual. Political speakers in that state generally use either an interpreter or speak first in English and then in Spanish. Signs on stores are often in both languages.

There are no people in the United States who have a better claim to the title of American citizens than these Spanish folks of the Southwest. When Kentucky was a frontier and Illinois was a howling wilderness, New Mexico was an old country with a civilization and an easy pleasant life all its own. When Chicago was a log fort and before San Francisco was thought of, Santa Fe was an old city. Throughout its early history, New Mexico was a sort of outlying territory living its own life, regardless of whether Spain or Mexico held dominion over it. Each possessed it for a time, and sent it some good governors and some bad ones. Then it became part of the United States, and had a much better government than ever before. The Apaches were driven out, and the railroads came, and with them much "dinero" from the far away East. These things, the Mexican people know, were done for them by "Tio Samuel"; they know that if they belonged to Old Mexico now, there would be sad times. Wherefore, they are a very loyal part of the citizenry of the United States.

ROTH PUTS IT UP TO THE ALDERMEN

Editor Tribune,
Dear Sir—If I am not asking too much, will you kindly insert the following for the benefit of the aldermen of the city of La Crosse.

To the Honorable Mayor and Common Council of the City of La Crosse.

Gentlemen—You are respectfully invited to inspect the results of your failure to adopt the building code offered by the city attorney at a recent meeting of your Honorable body. There is a building being erected in one of the best residence sections of the city, on Ferry street, which is not only a disgrace to the neighborhood but to the whole city. The construction of the foundation, workmanship and material speaks for itself. Go out and look it over, have a good laugh, admit your mistake and rectify it. I understand that the builder intends to erect more buildings on the same lot.

Respectfully,
FRANK G. ROTH.

COLONEL ASKS WEST TO AID AGAINST NATIONAL DECAY

CHICAGO, May 1.—A powerful appeal to the west to "lead in the effort for a robust and virile nationalism," which would bring preparedness "as an arm to help the soul of the nation" was voiced by Colonel Roosevelt here Saturday night in addressing the Illinois Bar association.

The colonel saw the nation as facing one of its greatest crisis now.

Colonel Roosevelt, speeding eastward today following an enthusiastic reception of his preparedness doctrines in Chicago, has tucked away in his grip a red-hot political statement, to be released soon. Those close to the colonel believe the statement will be released soon and that it is a clear amplification of his Trinidad statement and will outline the condition under which he will run for president.

rebel forces. Some further trouble is expected in villages south and west of Dublin where the news of the Sinn Feiners' defeat in the capital has not yet penetrated.

No intimation has come from official sources as to the punishment to be meted out to the rebels now in the hands of the British troops, including Countess Markiewicz, the sister of an Irish baron. One report brought here early today said that the countess had been wounded while encouraging the Sinn Feiners from behind a barricade.

The Irish capital today, in its central portion, recalls San Francisco after the earthquake. What were fine business buildings a week ago are tumbled ruins, blackened by smoke and scarred by bullets.

Swaying in the wind are gaunt walls, pierced in many places by British shells.

The populace is being fed soldier rations. Long lines form before central points for food distribution. Women and children of the poorer classes, with hunger pinched faces, stand in line beside wealthy residents of Dublin who are entreating the military to recover automobiles commandeered by the rebels when the riots began last Monday.

To each applicant army officers gave a supply of codfish and canned meat. Two soldiers accompany each woman receiving food to her home and make a thorough search of the premises.

SURRENDER GREEN

DUBLIN, May 1.—Irish rebels who were holding St. Stephen's Green, surrendered to the government forces last night. About 450 others entrenched in the central part of the city, laid down their arms at the foot of Parnell monument.

Rebels Lack Supplies

BY WILBUR S. FORREST
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
DUBLIN, April 30, by courier.—Sunrise today found the rebels still holding Four Courts and a handful entrenched in St. Stephen's Green, but the main body are prisoners in the hands of the government forces. (London dispatches on Friday asserted that St. Stephen's Green had been captured from the rebels.)

Both Four Courts and the Green were closely invested by British troops. The rebels are without food and have only scanty supplies of ammunition. They face starvation or surrender.

Rebel Forces Disappear

Excepting the groups congregated in those two areas and isolated bands of snipers, the rebel forces have disappeared. Many snipers were killed or captured Saturday night and sniping had practically ceased today. Sackville street, a rebel stronghold early in the week, was safe for pedestrians today and crowds gathered around the ruins of the general post-office building, shelled by the British and reduced to a pile of blackened debris.

The backbone of the rebellion was broken when James Connolly, "general of the Irish army," was fatally wounded at Liberty hall. Connolly was struck by a shell from a British gunboat. When Peter Pearse, leader of the rebels, was wounded in the leg, most of his followers surrendered.

A large number of the rebels have discarded their uniforms and have espoused capture by mingling in the crowds of civilians.

Mighty Nimrod.

A reputation for being the mightiest hunter the West has ever known is one of the legacies of A. H. Huston, pioneer ranchman of the Saratoga valley in Wyoming, who died not long ago. No man ever saw him miss a shot, and Jim Baker, famous frontiersman, and Jim Slade, a noted outlaw, have both declared him the most unerring marksman and quickest man with a gun they ever saw.

'EVERYMAN' READING PROVES RARE TREAT

Misses Gaily and Schaettle Well Received in Dramatic and Musical Program at Normal School

The dramatic and musical entertainment given at the normal auditorium Saturday evening by Miss Marie Schaettle and her guest, Miss Rowena Gaily, under the auspices of the Buskin club of the normal school, was a rare opportunity to listen to an artistic and high classic treatment of their respective interpretations of the spoken drama and music for the piano.

With her first number, Tarantelle, by MacDowell, Miss Gaily won the hearts of her listeners. In each number she displayed the studied technique and finished execution of the true artist. She responded very generously to numerous encores with compositions of her own. In each one of them Miss Gaily displays a deep conception of composition and harmony and a truly artistic temperament.

During the intermission in Miss Gaily's numbers, Miss Schaettle gave informally and briefly a talk on morality plays in general, their origin and inception and purpose, preparing her audience in a way for a better reception of her offering of the evening, "Everyman."

And indeed, a big offering it proved to be. Friends of Miss Schaettle and those who knew her versatility best and who had been watching her work the past few years, especially the last three years of preparation in Chicago, anticipated a treat, but hardly expected the work of a finished professional. The play, a deeply religious one, dealing with "Everyman's" preparation for, and oftentimes deeply tragic end—"Death"—gives wonderful scope for heavy work. In all of this and also in several encores Miss Schaettle displayed rare talent and truly masterful preparation. In Chicago Miss Schaettle has already become a favorite, having frequently appeared before exclusive audiences in "The Little Theater" and also before church societies and clubs. Last Monday she played the role of Portia in Julius Caesar.

The Saturday night program was repeated Sunday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Evans for the benefit of the Tuesday Study club, which recently studied "Everyman," and again Miss Schaettle and Miss Gaily covered themselves with glory.

"IT'S A BUSINESS" SAYS COMPOSER AT THE MAJESTIC

That the popular music business, especially the composition end is generally misunderstood, was gathered in an interview with Mr. R. C. Blick, well known composer, appearing with Mr. J. McKenzie at the Majestic Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

"People who buy music," said Mr. Blick, "have no idea of the evolution of the sheet they take home. They seem to think either that it's an inspiration of genius or a mechanical product. As a matter of fact it's neither one, but a combination of both. Taking it step by step; the first thing really is an inspiration, the title idea. Most songs popular today are evolved from the title idea alone. For instance, one thinks 'Well where is a romantic spot in the world, one that hasn't been done to death?' He takes up a novel of the south seas and notices the possibility of 'Singapore,' and goes to work."

The next step is the melody. Composers knowing each other's idiosyncrasies usually work in pairs, and heads are put together, harmony discussed, and soon the melody is ready for the arranger. Then the real work, the mechanical part of it, comes in. It is a true but not generally known fact that very few of the successful composers of popular music can put their ideas on paper. They play; some of them play with one or two fingers only, mostly by ear. A competent arranger is engaged and then the pianist of the team "gets his." He has in all probability, ideas that he can't get to his fingers, and there never was an arranger, the better trained musicians they are the harder they are to subdue, that didn't consider the harmony unharmonious, the phrasing bad, and the idea in general off color while he was transferring the music from the composer's fingers to black and white. There are hours of work to it, every measure being taken separately; first the treble action and then the corresponding bass, until finally the manuscript is finished.

Proof, or readable copy of the number is given to a "sight reading" pianist who has never heard the melody and the necessary corrections made. The lyric is then filled in to its corresponding notes and the whole sent to the publisher.

"MEENA'S ROMANCE" TEACHES THRIFT

Thrifty people commonly are looked upon as people who are trying to save money. There are, however, thrifty persons who economize only because it has been bred in them, and not because they need money at all. Just such a person is little Meena, in "Little Meena's Romance," a new Triangle-Fine Arts release.

She is a little Dutch girl born and brought up on a farm in Pennsylvania; and all she knows about life is that cleanliness is above godliness and that idleness is vice. Consequently, when after the death of her father, she goes to the magnificent New York home of her aunt to live, she just naturally never thinks to tell them that in her old telescope bag she has a fortune of her own.

Meena's Romance" will be at the Majestic today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

UNITY COMMITTEE WILL REPORT AT MEETING TUESDAY

Interest was rife today in the report of the unification committee of city commercial clubs, which is to be made public tomorrow evening at a general meeting and six o'clock dinner to be held in Germania hall. The joint committee of nine from the M. & J. club, the Retail Merchants and the Board of Trade is to be in charge of the dinner.

The plan which the joint committee was appointed to investigate contemplates a unified central organization combining the commercial bodies of the city into a common headquarters, with bureaus to correspond to the present organizations. The nine members of the committee have devoted much time and study to the matter, and have prepared an exhaustive report. Opportunity for discussion will be afforded all those who attend the meeting tomorrow night.

The committee which is to report consists of W. F. Hurtgen, John C. Burns, D. W. MacWillie, E. S. Dittman, W. F. Strauss, V. Tausche, W. F. Goodrich, A. L. Goetzmann and A. H. Schubert.

In a May-day celebration of a new wage contract, heavy police guards were sent to the Blue Island avenue plant of the International Harvester company plant, where 3,000 employees are on a strike.

Violence was feared at the Harvester plant, as result of a rumor that strike-breakers were put to work today.

MACHINISTS OUT

CINCINNATI, O., May 1.—Union headquarters estimated 3,500 machinists struck in 110 Cincinnati shops today. The machinists demand an eight-hour day through a reduction of working hours from 52 1/2 to 48 week. They want time and one-half for overtime.

The Block & Pollock company of Carthage, making shells, granted an eight-hour day today and announced a closed shop for the union within sixty days. Fifteen other shops have granted the union's demands.

YOUNGSTOWN STRUCK

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 1.—Five thousand employees in factories here were jobless today following the strike of 2,000 machinists who want an eight-hour day, closed shop and fifty cents an hour minimum pay. This is the first important strike in over a year of skilled labor.

The plants that were forced to close down were: General Fire-Proofing company, Trussed Concrete company, Williams Steel company, United Engineering company and several smaller concerns. The Youngstown Iron & Steel company was also forced to curtail operations. Fifteen hundred helpers were made idle in these plants by the machinists' strike.

At the Republic Rubber company, 1,500 locked out because the machinists showed sympathy with the strike, are still idle.

CARPENTERS OUT

AKRON, Ohio, May 1.—One thousand carpenters went on strike here today to enforce their demands for an eight hour day, fifty-five cents an

OPERATORS RISE

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 1.—Five thousand telegraphers have notified New York Central and Nickel Plate railroads that unless a fifteen percent wage increase is granted by Thursday, they will go on strike. J. J. Dermody, vice president of the railroad telegraphers, said he received this word from H. B. Perham, president of the union, today. A strike would cripple traffic on these lines.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., May 1.—Sixteen hundred elevator employees here struck today, bringing the total number of men out to 2,000. The only elevator working is the Fort William Elevator company. Men at Port Arthur are also striking.

Lost 23 Centuries
ALBANY, N. Y., May 1.—Twenty-three centuries of lost time is the record of New York's strikes and lockouts during the year ended September 29, 1915 according to the annual report of the bureau of mediation and arbitration to the state industrial commission today.

There were 194 industrial disputes in 1915, involving 56,262 persons who lost 868,395 working days. The total number of days lost by strikes in 1914 was 1,436,118. The strike loss last year amounted to more than $1,000,000.

Harbor Strike On
NEW YORK, May 1.—A strike of engineers on about 700 tugboats and lighters in New York harbor went into effect today. The Fabre liner Patria, with 1200 passengers from Mar-seilles and Palermo, arrived off Quarantine but was unable to dock on account of the strike and is lying outside the harbor. The New York & Porto Rican liner Brazos, with 200 passengers is also held up and two more liners are due to arrive within twenty-four hours. The strike has held up munition shipments for the allies.

Great May-Day Parade
One of the greatest May-Day labor parades in the history of New York was scheduled for today when more than 100,000 striking and locked out workers were to march through the streets of the business section. Most of the marchers were men and women of the cloak and suit making trade, thirty thousand of them being locked out and about 60,000 on strike in sympathy. The other strikers who had paraded include 10,000 painters, 3,000 carpenters, 2,000 metal workers and 2,000 bakers.

MORSE RENEWS HIS CHARGES AGAINST MODERN WOODMEN

PUBLIC MEETING OF CHARTER BOARD COMES WEDNESDAY

City officials were looking forward with interest today to the first public meeting of the charter revision committee, which will be held in the city hall Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. All interested persons are invited to attend the meeting and take part in the discussion of desirable changes in the city constitution. Several local attorneys, it is understood, have prepared suggestions for incorporation in the new charter, and members of the normal school faculty, interested in municipal government, have also drafted recommendations.

A rapid exchange of telegrams between Secretary of War Baker at Washington and Generals Scott and Funston in El Paso this morning indicated that the administration had not fully decided on its policy. Major Sample, commandant at Columbus, N. M., was ordered to obtain General Pershing's opinion on the Carranza demand for immediate withdrawal.

Scott is said to be lukewarm on this issue before the international conference here. Funston is strongly against yielding to the Mexican demand.

Secretary Baker was reported to have asked the American envoys what effect withdrawal would have on the border and in Mexico. The two generals replied in a long code message understood to have contained the opinion that withdrawal of the United States troops would undoubtedly lead to renewed border raids.

May Meet Again Today
If Scott and Funston receive instructions from Washington in time their second conference with General Obregon and the Mexican envoy may be held today. Washington's reply is not expected to be a peremptory refusal of Obregon's demands. Further conferences are expected to be held. It was also assumed from President Wilson's previous statements on the subject that the army would be withdrawn if its retention meant war with Mexico.

Pro-intervention interests here have placed documents in the hands of General Scott aiming to show that the Carranza soldiers would not co-operate to police the border but are themselves looting American properties in Mexico. W. S. Stuler, general manager of the National Mines & Smelter company, sent Scott a letter alleging that Carranza soldiers took all the American ammunition from the company's employees at Magistral and afterward looted the property.

Scott Thought Authorized to Suggest Movement of Troops North While De Facto Work in South

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Mexican Ambassador Designate Arredondo reiterated to Secretary Lansing today Carranza's request that the American troops immediately withdraw from Mexico.

Lansing told Arredondo he would reply to the request upon conclusion of the El Paso conference.

BY CARL D. GROAT
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The administration does not intend to heed General Obregon's suggestion for withdrawal of the American troops from Mexico. This was learned definitely this afternoon. New and more elaborate instructions than heretofore given went forward to General Scott, following a conference between President Wilson and Secretary of War Baker and another session between Secretary of State Lansing, Counselor Polk and Secretary Baker.

BY E. T. CONKLE
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

EL PASO, Texas, May 1.—The question of withdrawing the punitive expedition from Mexico, on which may depend peace or war between the United States and Mexico, was up to President Wilson today.

General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the United States army, refused in the Saturday conference on the Mexican situation to yield to General Alvaro Obregon's demands that the American forces be withdrawn. Although no definite agreement was reached, General Scott's vigorous reply to Carranza's representative is interpreted as a declaration that the United States forces will remain in Mexico until the purpose of the expedition is accomplished to the full satisfaction of the administration.

Funston dropped a significant remark when told that three correspondents returned from the front in Mexico under the impression that there would be no more big events. "I think they are mistaken," Funston said.

Wants Chance
Obregon argued that the presence of American troops was unnecessary and that the de facto government should be given a chance to demonstrate its strength.

TOWNER DECLARES COLONIES NOT A WEAKNESS SOURCE

Iowan Argues for Retention of Philippines when Administration Concedes More Time for Debate

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Bending every effort to stave off the defeat of the Philippine independence bill, administration leaders in the house today conceded the first point—that for more time on the debate—to the opposition. Instead of limiting debate to three hours, Chairman Jones of the insular affairs committee argued for eight hours. He met with strong opposition in his own party on even this limitation, Brumbaugh of Ohio leading the fight for more time.

Republicans centered their fight on the Clark amendment for freeing the islands in four years.

Defeat of this amendment at all costs, was the word sent out by Towner of Iowa, ranking republican member on the committee.

"Abandoning the islands we must surrender the mastery of the Pacific," Towner said. "If colonies are also a source of weakness, then Great Britain is the weakest nation in the world. If we are to control the Pacific as we must do, the Philippines will be a source of invaluable strength to us."

OWNERS HASTEN TO BUY LITTLE BRASS DOG CHARM

If every dog has his day, as the old saying goes, today is the day for La Crosse's canine population, for today began the annual sale of license tags, without which poor Fido's life is forfeit. Owners were besieging the police station this morning to get the little brass tags whose presence at their pets' collars will insure them against danger from everything but automobiles and their own roving dispositions.

Lady dogs, as is fitting in a chivalrous community, are rated at $2 per license, which is twice the fee charged for males. It is estimated that there are 1,800 dogs in the city. The money from the sale of licenses goes into the police pension fund. Owners have until May 15 to buy licenses. Thereafter they are liable to fine.

Thomas Woolley got No. 1 tag this morning. Oscar G. Doering's dog will wear No. 2. Mr. Doering paid for his tag on April 7, but No. 1 tag was given to Mr. Woolley several days ago when he told the city treasurer he would be out of town today and bought his tag before the opening day.

GRIP INCREASES REAPER'S HARVEST IN FIRST QUARTER

Death Rate Goes Up with Ravages of Disease Among City's Older People

Grip, which caused the La Crosse high school to shut down during the past winter, was an efficient aide of the Grim Reaper, according to figures obtained this morning from Dr. J. M. Furman concerning the death rate here during the first quarter of 1916.

There were 164 deaths in the city from New Year's until the first of April. In the first three months of 1915 there were but 125. In the same period of 1914 there were 134 deaths.

"The grip epidemic hit the city hard," the health commissioner said this morning, explaining the rise in the death rate. "It was particularly hard on old people, whose lowered vitality was unable to resist the disease. In many cases grip paved the way for pneumonia and other dangerous illnesses."

"The abnormal increase in the number of deaths was almost entirely confined to persons of advanced age. Our infant death rate was practically normal."

EVENSON'S HURLERS NOT ON JOB AND HE LOSES TO TRAINMEN

Al Wild and He Forces In Two Scores by Hitting Three Men and Walking Four

Fitzki has a sore arm from the game a week ago with the Nelsons. Anderson failed to show up, and this is the score: Trainmen 6, Athletes 1.

Al Evenson, manager of the Athletes, took the mound in the absence of his leading hurlers. He was unable to locate the plate and he walked four men and hit three, forcing in two scores.

The Athletes were the first to score, sending over the lone tally in the fourth on three successive hits. Squiers, former Nelson, was nicked for six blows in five innings, while Ritter allowed but one hit in four frames.

Four members of the Nelsons were in the Trainmen lineup. Charley Weigant, former Minny leaguer, went hitless in five times at bat.

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Sam Crawford fattened their batting averages yesterday with two hits apiece, while Benny Kauff impatiently twiddled his thumbs waiting for today's game with the Dodgers at New York.

Even six pitchers could not stop the Indians. Hughie Jennings was almost frantic.

Fielder Jones is having a dence of a time as a "miracle man." The fans at St. Louis rubbed it in yesterday by jeering every time the Browns made a good play.

MUCKS A DOUBLE WINNER AT PENN FIELD CARNIVAL

Badger Weight Artist Wins Discus Throw and Shot Put with Ease Over Big Field

CARNIVAL DISAPPOINT IN RELAYS

Badgers Touted High for Mile and Four Mile But Cornell Takes the Long Event

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 1.—West and east divided honors in the twenty-second annual of the University of Pennsylvania on Franklin field Saturday afternoon.

Of the special contests on the track and in the field west and east finished with four victories. On this basis of points for places the east showed a slight superiority with 14 to 11 places, due to the preponderance of numbers. In the relay races, however, the western collegians, for the first time in many years, failed to get a first place.

Victories for the west came in the 100 yard dash, 120 yard hurdle, and the discus and shot put, while the east fared better in events requiring leaping ability, taking first place in broad and high jumps, and pole vault and in the javelin throw.

Mucks Double Winner

The only double winner of the day was Arlie Mucks, the giant from Wisconsin, who also set two new collegiate records, bettering the distance in the shot put.

Mucks set another new record in the discus. He was far superior to his opponents in all events. The most spectacular victory of the day was gained by a westerner, Bob Simpson of the University of Missouri, who set a new world's record in the 120 yard high hurdle on grass, but was deprived of a record on a technicality of a knocked down hurdle. Simpson covered the ten barriers in 15 seconds, two-fifths of a second better than the best previous mark. However, he was unfortunate enough to knock down a hurdle, and so lost credit for the record.

Smith, Michigan, Wins 100

In the 100 yards dash the west made a sweep, two Smiths taking the first two places, with Sol Butler of Duquesne, fourth. H. Smith of Michigan, the inter-collegiate champion, won two heats and then took a blanket finish by six inches over C. Smith of Wisconsin. The four mile relay, in which Wisconsin was looked upon with fear, was a procession for Cornell, which equaled the world's record of 17:51 1-5, for the distance. Schardt of Wisconsin ran the best individual mile in 4:25.

In the broad jump the west won three places. H. P. Pogue of Illinois finished second, and his teammate, U. Carter was third. Butler, the Negro athlete of Duquesne, finished fourth.

As usual the west sent a galaxy of gigantic weight throwers and they made eastern collegians. Arlie Mucks, the tall Wisconsin weight thrower, holder of the American championship, defeated a big field of shotputters with ridiculous ease. His best toss with the sixteen pound missile was 48 feet 1 1-2 inches, only a half inch behind Ralph Rose's record, and nearly four feet ahead of Richards of Cornell and Cann of New York, who finished in order.

Summary of Events

Two mile university relay—Won by Yale (Rolle, Cooper, Barker, Overton); Chicago, second; Michigan, third; Princeton, fourth; Pennsylvania, fifth. Time 7:53. Equals the world's record.

One mile university freshman relay—Won by Pennsylvania (Brennan, Walker, Clayton, Smith); Princeton, second; Penn State, third; Columbia, fourth. Time, 3:29 4-5.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at first sign of Bladder irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

GRIP AND NEURASTHENIA

There is a form of neurasthenia that follows the grip. Doctors call it "post-grip" neurasthenia. One of the foremost medical authorities of New York city in a lecture in the international clinics, said: "Broadly speaking, every victim of the grip will suffer from post-grip neurasthenia also. Lowering of nervous tone with increased irritability is the most striking effect of the disease, languor of mind and body, disturbed sleep and vague pains in the head and elsewhere. The treatment calls for rest and a tonic."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a non-alcoholic tonic, are particularly suited for building up the blood and strengthening the nerves after an attack of the grip. The rich, red blood expels the lingering germs from the system and transforms despondent grip victims into cheerful, healthy, happy men and women.

If you have had the grip get a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now from the nearest drug store and begin the treatment at once.

On request we will send you a free pamphlet, "Building Up the Blood," which contains a chapter on the grip. Address the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

TEDDY'S VIEWS ON PREPAREDNESS SAME AS TEN YEARS AGO

CHICAGO, Ill., May 1.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's views on preparedness have not changed one whit in eleven years. The colonel said so himself on his arrival in Chicago to deliver a two-fisted speech on preparedness before the Illinois State Bar Association Saturday.

As Roosevelt left the Twentieth Century Limited at the station, Sergeant Clarence E. Orr of Newark, Ohio, who in 1905 won the president's marksmanship medal and was congratulated by Roosevelt, pushed forward to meet him.

"Here's a letter," said Orr, "that you wrote me when I won the medal."

The colonel turned to the newspaper squad and said: "My views haven't changed since I wrote this letter. Read it, for it expresses my views today."

The letter, under date of September 11, 1905, expressed a belief in universal military service.

RAINEY BILL FOR TARIFF BOARD HAS CHAMBER APPROVAL

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 1.—A bill to create a tariff commission which was revised and reintroduced into the House by Representative Rainey of Illinois, has been analyzed and endorsed by a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, of which Daniel P. Morse of New York, is the chairman. This action means that in the opinion of the committee the bill accords with the principles for which the membership of the National Chamber declared in a referendum which was carried by an overwhelming vote. Accordingly the committee is now asking the members of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to support the Rainey bill, the text of which is printed in a pamphlet just sent out from the Washington headquarters, and to do what they can towards its enactment at this session of Congress.

The bill provides for a tariff commission of six members to be appointed by the president and confirmed by

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The average wage increase, in those industries where there have been increases—in the United States in the past year, has been 11 per cent, according to figures compiled by the bureau of labor statistics, federal reserve agents and the American Federation of Labor. The following average increases have been put into effect.

Nineteen per cent paint manufacturing industries.
Seventeen per cent automobile and auto part factories.
Fifteen per cent flour and grist mill workers, ship builders, electrical supply industries, iron and steel workers.
Fourteen per cent rubber, machinists, foundry, locomotives.
Thirteen per cent cement, lime, dry goods, hardware, paper and products.
Twelve per cent pottery, pressed brick, groceries, woollens.
Eleven per cent chemicals clothing, soap, fertilizer.
Ten per cent lumber mill work, slaughtering.
Nine per cent agricultural implements, furniture, shoe leather, silks, laces.
Eight per cent confectionery, common cotton goods.
Seven per cent department stores, hats, watches, advertising, office machines, dental supplies, roofing materials.
Six per cent tobacco and cigars.
Five per cent coal and coal mining, carpets, rugs, linoleum, glasses.
For the most part these increases have gone to skilled labor, but there have been numerous increases in wages paid unskilled labor.
The figures given do not include increases that have taken the form of bonus, as in many munitions plants.
Eight hour day agitation is playing a big part in the change brought about. This was emphasized by Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor who has just returned from a trip to Pittsburgh and Youngstown.
"There is a greater unrest today than has been manifest in many years," Morrison said. "To some this condition is alarming, but I believe discontent is a sign of life."

DEATH RATE OF
FIRST QUARTER OF 1916 SETS RECORD

MADISON, Wis., May 1.—The Wisconsin death rate for the first quarter of 1916 was higher than has ever been recorded in the state during that season of the year since the adoption of the uniform registration law. If the same rate were continued throughout the year, the annual mortality would be in excess of 36,000 deaths as compared with a mortality of approximately 28,000 per year during the last seven-year period.

DISCUSS UNION OF CHURCHES OF
NORTH AND SOUTH

SARATOGA, N. Y., May 1.—The general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which represents churches in all parts of the world, convened here today. Sessions will continue for a month during which the question of the union of the churches in the north and south will be the principal subject of discussion. It was reported that German delegates will not be present owing to inability to leave their country for fear of enemy searches on trans-Atlantic liners.

It is better to be run down by a chauffeur than by an evil tongue.

SAYS WOMEN ARE CRAZY ABOUT IT

Using gasoline to dry clean everything and save $5 in an hour.

Dry cleaning at home is all the rage here, says a well-known downtown druggist. Any woman can do five dollars' worth of dry cleaning at home at very little cost by dissolving two ounces of solvite in two gallons of gasoline; then immerse the articles to be cleaned; rub a little and in a few moments the gasoline evaporates and the articles cleaned look as bright and fresh as new.

ALICE BRADY IN BIG FOREST PLAY

Alice Brady, the popular star of the speaking stage who has recently been signed to a long term contract by the World Film corporation, will appear at the Bijou theater on Tuesday and Wednesday this week in the great Larry Evans' story of all outdoor scenes, "Then I'll Come Back to You."

In filming this five-act production the producing company was taken out west, where the big timber tracts, the gushing rapids of the rivers and the very surroundings for miles around would lend to the story the very atmosphere the author desired for the technical and atmospheric interpretation of his story.

Patient—"But, doctor, you are not asking five dollars for merely taking a cinder out of my eye?" Specialist—"Er—no. My charge is for removing a foreign substance from the cornea."

Flood Bound City Gets First

Yesterday Morning; Water Now Low

ONALASKA, Wis., May 1.—(Special.)—Cheers greeted the first street car to reach Onalaska from La Crosse since last Wednesday, when it made its way through the now shallow water near the Line House and continued to the terminal at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Traffic was suspended Wednesday when the water stage of the Mississippi reached thirteen and six-tenths feet and covered the interurban line—tracks for eighty rods with a depth of eleven inches of water.

Society Entertained
The Ladies' Aid society of the First United Lutheran church will be entertained in the church parlors next Thursday, May 4.

Play Ball Game
The Onalaska baseball team played a picked-up team from town at the Agricultural school grounds Sunday.

Banquet and Dance
At the last meeting of the high school alumni a motion was made to give a banquet and dance on May 26. The following committees were appointed:

Banquet committee—Mrs. E. L. Childs and Mrs. L. R. Gould, who will appear their own assistants.
Program committee—W. A. Moran, W. J. Berg, Arthur Foss and Mrs. Stevenson.

Music, dance and hall committee—J. C. Aiken, Erwin Comeau and Alex Thompson.

Dish committee—Warren Aiken, Viva Stifter, and Mabel Sjolander. The class of 1915 will do the decorating.

Clean up Week
F. L. Aiken, mayor, has planned the first week in May as "Clean-up Week" and wishes each citizen to help in the city spring house cleaning.

Small Fire
An alarm of fire was turned in about 6 o'clock Friday evening but before the department arrived the fire was out. The fire was in the home of J. H. Bricklin and started in the chimney.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.
